

My Achievements

Global lounge

King's College London open for the first time during Christmas break for all those students who do not go back home with free food and free games giving them a feeling that they are being looked upon. Sometimes small things can have a great impact.

Refreshers orientation

Organized a refreshers orientation for all those international students who missed fresher's because of visa delays.

Room bookings time from 10 to 3 for king's room

Long room bookings waiting times have always been a big difficulty for our activity groups to have events for our activity groups hence taking that into account, I successfully brought down the notice time to book King's room from 10 to 3 days.

Visa fees for international students

Managed to secure visa expenses for all international students wishing to go for a sabbatical position. This means that if you are an international student and you get elected as a sabbatical officer in KCLSU, the SU would bear your visa expenses. I wanted to incentivize sabbatical positions to our international students and encourage representation from the sizeable demographic of international students we have at King's College London. I believe international students are an indispensable part of the student community and we are trying our best to make sure they are supported and are active members of the SU alongside other students

345 rooms for International students in the King's affordable accommodation scheme

Did what people thought was impossible- I successfully got 345 rooms at subsidized price for all those international students who come from lower income backgrounds. Many of our international students face immense financial hardships but are not looked upon. I changed that in King's and made sure we think about them. This is not about affecting 345 students, this is about affecting 345 families.

Toilets with douches

Considering the sizeable demographic from Asian countries and the middle east, I made sure that we have toilets with douches in King's and successfully made sure that it is a policy of KCL estates that we will have toilets with douches in any future estates developments.

Accessible toilet campaign

Many individuals are affected by 'invisible' chronic conditions and illness, and need the use of accessible toilet facilities. I am been working to implement improved signs for accessible toilets, with the message that 'not every disability is visible', to raise awareness of chronic conditions and provide fully accessible facilities for all.
